Winnipeg—It’s Worth the Trip!

Spring in Winnipeg is announced by the lilacs that bloom profusely throughout the city and the 600,000 inhabitants who make up this ethnically diverse city. The first Europeans were the Scots, who in the early 1800s traveled from the north along the great rivers with the Hudson’s Bay Company. The city became a magnet for other immigrants when the Canadian Pacific Railway opened the West, making Winnipeg the distribution center for the entire Canadian Northwest. Waves of Icelanders, Russian Mennonites, Ukrainians, Poles, and eastern Europeans Jews stopped here to become farmers, fishermen, small merchants and railway workers. In the early 19th century French-speaking immigrants arrived and Winnipeg now has one of the largest French-speaking populations outside Quebec. Early fur traders once canoed the waters of both the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, stopping to trade at the rivers’ junction on the site of Modern Winnipeg. Today visitors to Winnipeg can stop at the Winnipeg Fur Exchange to purchase trapper parkas, fur-lined moccasins and can sample the ethnic cuisine of the areas 700 restaurants and delis.

Winnipeg’s location in the center of Canada offers easy access from all points. A short one hour flight from the hub city of Minneapolis or three hours from each coast, Winnipeg’s clean air and moderate temperatures make it an ideal setting for our conference activities. The Michelin Travel Guide gave Winnipeg its highest travel rating!

York, England

Few cities in England are as rich in history as York. Encircled by its 13th-14th century city walls, York is perhaps the best preserved medi eval city in Great Britain. Quintus Petillus Ceriials marched his Roman army to northern Britain in 71 AD and built the first walls of the fortress Eboracum, known today as York. The York Minster, one of the great cathedrals of the world, is distinguished by its three towers, all built in the 15th century, with its medley of stained glass from the Middle Ages—Angelico blues, ruby reds, forest greens, and ambers.

Two hours by rail from London and Edinburgh, York is the home of the “Yorvik Exhibition”, a striking representation of life in York during the Viking era. Conference attendees will attend receptions at the palace of the Archbishop of York and at Yorkshire Hall. A conference dinner is scheduled for the Merchant Taylors Hall, the ancient Guild Hall of the city. The conference hotel is near the center of the old walled city and close to many other attractions.

Don’t miss this opportunity to network with our international friends and enjoy the hospitality and sights of England.

Tony Wells

Tony Wells’ family of origin reminds one of the popular English TV show “Upstairs Downstairs”. His grandfather was a butler who married the cook where both were employed at Shiplake Manor near Henley, England. His father, one of six brothers, baked royal wedding cakes for a local biscuit company. Tony joined the Royal Airforce and was trained as an aeronautical engineer. He attended London University and received his divinity degree. He was a Methodist clergyman for 10 years. He and his first wife, now deceased, had three sons. Tony married his wife Rosemary, a University librarian, in 1982. They live in a cottage constructed in 1730 in Bath, England. Tony is a railroad buff and has a steam railway in his half acre garden. Tony was appointed Senior Probation Officer and Divorce Court Welfare Officer in 1971. He and his staff were responsible for introducing “in court” mediation and “divorce experience” workshops to the UK. From 1983-1985 Tony was a member of the Lord Chancellor’s Matrimonial Causes Procedure Committee. This Committee was responsible for reforming divorce practices to include mediation. Together with representatives of the Law Society, he established the Standing Committee for Inter-Disciplinary Cooperation in Family Proceedings. He is now the Chairperson of the Committee. Tony has attended several AFCC conferences, is a member of the Board of Directors of AFCC and has contributed articles to AFCC’s journal. Candor or Chaos: The Case of Confidentiality in Mediation

One of the most vexing and important policy issues in the field of alternative dispute resolution is that of confidentiality in mediation. The American Bar Association is working on a model statute. Some of the issues relative to the proposed model statute were discussed by Michael L. Prigoff, a partner in the Englewood, New Jersey law firm of Lebshon & Prigoff in the Seton Hall Legislative Journal, Vol. 12:1 1988. The following is taken from this article.

Reasons for Protection of Confidentiality
• Effective mediation requires candor. Mediators must be able to draw out baseline positions and interests, a task which would become impossible if the parties were constantly looking over their shoulders. Compromise negotiations often require the admission of facts which disputants would never otherwise concede.
• Fairness to the disputants requires confidentiality. Mediation could be used as a discovery device if mediation communications were admissible in subsequent judicial actions.
• The mediator must remain neutral in fact and in perception. The mediator’s potential to be an adversary in subsequent legal proceedings would curtail the disputants’ willingness to confide during mediation.
• Privacy is an incentive for many to choose mediation. The option presented by the mediator to settle disputes quietly and informally is often a primary motivator for parties choosing this process.

The Problem: No Consistent Approach
Despite the recognized importance of confidentiality in mediation, there is no consistent pattern of protection available through statute, rule or case law. Three sources of law aid in protecting confidentiality in mediation: evidentiary exclusions, discovery limitations and agreements of confidentiality.

Evidentiary Exclusions
Many jurisdictions have adopted Rule 408 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, which strengthens the common rule of law by partially barring evidence of conduct or statements in compromise discussions. However, the protection afforded by Rule 408 is severely limited. Rule 408 provides no protection when the validity or amount of a civil claim is not in dispute. For a number of mediations involving family, neighborhood or minor criminal issues, Rule 408 does not apply.

Discovery
The law regarding discovery provides even less certainty in assuring that mediation proceedings will be kept out of attorney’s files in preparation for subsequent litigation. Any relevant information which may lead to admissible evidence is discoverable. The court has inherent power to quash a subpoena but a party seeking to do so has a particularly heavy burden.

Confidentiality Agreements
Disputants may agree at the outset of mediation that nothing said subsequently will be disclosed. These agreements are persuasive as to the parties’ intent. However, courts do not uniformly uphold such agreements.

Case law
Recent reported cases on confidentiality in mediation underscore the need for statutory guidance to judges addressing confidentiality issues. A recent survey of mediation program directors suggests a growing number of unreported cases where mediators have been subpoenaed.

Legislation
At least ten states have enacted legislation specifically dealing with confidentiality in mediation. Some of these provisions are general, while others apply specifically to community or family mediation. These statutes differ in a variety of respects including the scope and the breadth of the protection afforded and the existence and applicability of exceptions.

Toward a New Privilege
Confidentiality of mediation is not necessarily a bar to “correct” disposal of litigation. The information collected in connection with a mediation proceeding is generated for the purpose of that proceeding and would not exist but for the settlement attempt. If the information is otherwise discoverable, then it can be disclosed in subsequent litigation. Mediation cannot be used to shield otherwise relevant and admissible evidence. Potential harms of a blanket mediation privilege should be addressed through appropriate exceptions. Current approaches toward the important issue of confidentiality in mediation represent a hodge-podge of policies and outcomes. A more consistent approach provides for the promotion of the salutary emerging alternatives as well as gives the bar, the courts, practitioners and parties more reliable guideposts in dealing with these alternatives.

California Judicial Council Requests Grant Proposals
The California Statewide Office of Family Court Services announces a request for concept papers for research on the California Family Court system. Approximately $105,000 will be disbursed. The suggested individual grant maximum is $50,000. Funding is available but not limited to projects in the following areas:
1. Factors insuring that child support orders are paid, particularly in non AFDC families;
2. Comparison of mediated versus litigated marital dissolutions; and
3. Substance abuse problems in the Family Court setting.
 Preference will be given to proposals that demonstrate a collaborative arrangement among experienced researchers and relevant court systems and/or service delivery providers. Submissions must be received no later than March 19, 1990. Application packets are available from:
Statewide Office of Family Court Services Administrative Office of the Courts Judicial Council of California 595 Market Street, 30th Floor San Francisco, CA 94105 (415) 396-9153

Will you help sign up a new member?

AFCC is embarking on an aggressive membership drive. We need you to contact your colleagues and tell them about AFCC. This kind of personal contact with others in your field is the most effective way to add to our membership. Tell someone today about AFCC and invite them to come to one of our regional or annual meetings.

The AFCC Newsletter is published four times a year in January, April, July and October. News items should be sent by the 15th of the month preceding publication to Newsletter Editor, Ann L. Mline, 329 W. Wilson St., Madison, WI 53703, (608) 251-4001.
