AFCC Sights Set on Chicago

by Tracy Mayer, AFCC Intern, Madison, WI

AFCC’s 38th Annual Conference, Conflict Resolution, Children and the Courts, kicks off on May 9, 2001 at the Westin Hotel on Michigan Avenue in Chicago. The four-day conference will feature more than fifty pre-conference institutes, workshops and plenary sessions addressing cutting edge issues for professionals who work with families and children in conflict.

This year’s plenary session presenters represent a “Who’s Who” in family conflict resolution. Presenters include researchers Dr. Judith Walkerstein, Dr. Paul Amato, and Dr. Janet Walker, law professors Robert Mookin and Jay Folberg, Dr. Isolina Ricci, Assistant Director of California’s Center for Children, Families and the Courts, and Dr. Arnold Shandivold, President of the Association for Conflict Resolution.

This year’s conference will feature a variety of workshops addressing topics including domestic violence, high conflict families, representing unreasonable clients, mediating step family cases and much more.

Judicial Officers Forum

AFCC’s Judicial Officers Interest Group, chaired by Hon. Fred Newton and Hon. Linda Dessau, will be presenting the Third Annual Judicial Officers Forum on Thursday, May 10, 3:30pm-6:30pm. This year’s program, The Impact of Religious Issues in Custody Disputes will feature Hon. Mosche Jacobius, Presiding Judge of the Cook County Domestic Relations Court, Daniel Gottlieb, Associate Director of the Shlain Institute of Israel, Carolyn Wah, J.D. and Hon. Fred Newton. Following the program participants will have the opportunity for informal networking.

Extended Workshops

Friday afternoon, May 11, AFCC will present four extended workshops. These three-hour, hands-on sessions will provide participants with the opportunity for an in-depth learning experience. Extended workshops include:

- Working with Children: Techniques and Tips for Effective Interviewing, with Kathleen Clark, Ph.D., Executive Director, Ohio Task Force on Family Law and Children, Galion, OH; Alan P. Childs, P.E.D., Chicago, IL; and Hon. Lisa Rubel Murphy, Cook County Domestic Relations Division, Chicago, IL.
- Negotiation and Communication Skills for Lawyers, with Nina Mierding, J.D., Past President, Academy of Family Mediators, Ventura, CA.
- How To’s in Family Law Cases Involving Domestic Violence, with Leslie Drzdk, Ph.D., Newport Beach, CA; Toby Kleinman, J.D., Adler & Kleinman, New Brunswick, NJ; and Lenore Walker, Ed.D., Author, The Battered Woman’s Syndrome, Denver, CO.
- Supervised Visitation: Facilitative and Therapeutic Models, with Susan Buckman-Schulson, J.D., L.C.S.W., Office of the Public Guardian, Chicago, IL; Nancy Cohen, L.C.S.W., Chicago, IL; Penny Hinze, M.S.W.; Sheila Murphy-Russell, M.S., DuPage County Psychological Services, Wheaton, IL; Maureen Sheehy, M.A., Evanston, IL; Kimberly Stemm, M.S.W., Naperville Community School

New AFCC Web Site Launched

AFCC is pleased to announce the launch of its new web site. The new site provides members with some exciting new pages and new and improved navigation.

Members Only Interest Group Discussion Forum

The highlight of the new AFCC web site is the members only online discussion forum. AFCC members have the opportunity to participate in on-line discussions on nearly twenty topics including the Alienated Child, Unified Family Courts, Parent Education and Domestic Abuse. The forums are facilitated by AFCC Interest Group Coordinators and provide members with the opportunity to ask questions and participate in discussion on cutting edge issues. AFCC members can log in to the site using their email address as their log-in name and password. After entering the members only page, members may then create a private password for future use. If you experience any difficulty logging in, please contact Dawn Holmes, AFCC Registrar at (608) 664-3750 or afcc@afccnet.org.

Resource Page

The site also features a new resource page which offers links to searchable databases and other useful web based documents. The resource page also contains AFCC’s Model Standards of Practice for Child Custody Evaluation and the new Model Standards of Practice for Family and Divorce Mediation. Both are available on-line and in downloadable and printable pdf files.

The AFCC web site continues to offer access to AFCC conference brochures, registration form, membership information and application and general information about AFCC. If you haven’t visited in awhile, check out the new site at www.afccnet.org.
PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Hon. Arline Rotman (ret.), Boston, MA

It is often said that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. I have noticed recently that many of the larger, single-disciplinary organizations such as the American Bar Association, National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges and American Psychological Association have begun to offer interdisciplinary programs which strongly resemble AFCC conferences.

Notwithstanding program similarities, as the only organization with a truly interdisciplinary membership, AFCC remains unique in our ability to support the cross fertilization of ideas on a regular and ongoing basis through our conferences, publications and chapters. By now you should be aware of our latest effort to enhance interdisciplinary networking, AFCC’s on-line discussion forums.

Access to the discussion forums is available to AFCC members through the members’ section of our new web site. If you are an AFCC member and have not yet seen our new site, just go to www.afccnet.org and visit any of our interest groups. If you are not yet an AFCC member you can use the web site to join AFCC, then join the discussions of greatest interest to you. As new issues and ideas emerge, we expect that new interest groups will be formed.

Family law has a unique position within the legal system. No other area of the law involves the interplay of social policy, interpersonal dynamics, family systems and legal doctrine. As family conflict becomes more complex, interdisciplinary forums such as AFCC interest groups, conferences and publications are no longer luxuries for those who want to stay ahead of the curve. Members of other organizations are now realizing what AFCC members have always known. An interdisciplinary approach to our work is necessary if we wish to provide effective services to families. I believe that this explains why other organizations have developed similar programs and it is also the reason that AFCC is evolving from a small volunteer- led organization into a more effective far-reaching professional organization widely recognized for its intellectual leadership in the family court community.

To keep pace with our growth in size and stature, AFCC leadership has invested significant time and effort in reviewing the needs of the association. In the past two years with assistance of consultants we have conducted a member survey and organizational assessment which led to intensive work by AFCC’s Governance Task Force and Bylaws Committee. The results are incorporated into our new bylaws which were sent to all AFCC members and will be offered for approval at the AFCC Annual Conference, May 9-12, 2001 in Chicago.

The new bylaws changes recognize that AFCC cannot be effectively governed by a fifty-person Board of Directors nor by an eight member Executive Committee. One body was too big and the other too small. Therefore, the new bylaws set the size of the Board at 19 members. The people who will comprise the new board will be taking on significant responsibilities for shaping and implementing a new programmatic and financial strategic plan to guide our future growth.

Recognizing the extraordinary talent and ideas that lie beyond the Board of Directors, the bylaws create a new Advisory Council. The broadly defined role of the Advisory Council is to make recommendations to the Board about issues which AFCC should consider addressing. Over time, both the Board and the Advisory Council will fine tune their individual roles as well as their relationship to one another and to the administrative staff in Madison.

This new structure represents a significant change from the past. The countless and thoughtful volunteer hours that many of our members have given to creating this new structure should bear fruit for the future.

As I consider all that we are undertaking I continue to be amazed by the personal qualities of our members. Other professional organizations to which we all feel we must belong have significant advantages. Having to serve only a single discipline, their mission is more easily defined. They have the financial advantage of endowments, access to government funding and more clearly defined paths to foundation funding which allows for more staff to carry out their programs. Our greatest advantage, however, remains our committed membership. In this day and age of consumerism and the seeming veneration of the accumulation of wealth, AFCC members are marked by their willingness to commit their time and intellectual capital to improve the quality of life of others.

I would like all of us to take an extra moment to enjoy the personal pride resulting from remaining true to our ideals. And I would like to thank each of you for the enormous privilege you have bestowed on me by allowing me to serve as your President. I look forward to seeing you all in Chicago.
CONVERSATION CORNER

Stu Webb, Collaborative Family Law

Stu Webb is a Minneapolis family law practitioner who is widely acknowledged as the founder of Collaborative Law, an innovative way to practice family law that is catching on with family law attorneys around the world. Mr. Webb has presented on Collaborative Law for AFCC and other organizations throughout North America.

AFCC: What is collaborative law and how is it different from traditional legal divorce proceedings?

SW: Collaborative law is a way of practicing law whereby the attorneys for both parties to a dispute agree to assist their clients in resolving conflict and reaching agreement using cooperative strategies rather than adversarial techniques and litigation. The attorneys by agreement with their clients are disqualified from participating in any ensuing adversarial proceedings and will withdraw from their representation in such an event. The key to collaborative practice is the premise that the collaborative lawyers will not engage in a litigation practice if retained collaboratively. The bottom line in collaborative divorce work is finding a way for the parties to reach agreement on all relevant issues outside of court proceedings. Traditional legal divorce proceedings foster an adversarial approach—us against them. This begins with the service of the Summons and Petition. Immediately, the recipient of the service feels attacked, invaded and fearful. The necessary response is to seek out an adversarial lawyer to defend against the attack in an attempt to right the balance. And they’re off running to the first hearing, which intensifies the polarity with negative affidavits and arguments asking the court to solve their problems for them. In collaborative law, the parties and their attorneys work toward agreement before either party has been served with divorce papers. The courts are generally only involved to process the final papers after the parties have reached agreement on all issues.

AFCC: You have been identified as the founder of the collaborative law movement. How did its inception come about?

SW: Through desperation! In the late 1980’s, after practicing traditional civil law for eight years and family law for seventeen years, I was approaching burn-out. I hated the adversarial nature of my practice and hated to go to work in the morning. It was becoming harder and harder to tolerate the schizophrenic nature of trial and family practice. Incivility seemed on the increase rather than the decrease. In other words, I’d had it! I was prepared to close down my practice and, in preparation for that, started taking courses in psychology. It did not take too many courses to convince me that my future did not lie in becoming a psychologist. So then I started thinking, if I was willing to ditch my practice, maybe I could come up with a way to continue my family law practice using a model that would allow me to continue those parts of my practice which I enjoyed and eliminate the rest. I started experimenting. I worked with another lawyer that I trusted to achieve client settlements in a four-party setting. That model fell apart disastrously when a case we were handling turned into a case from hell and we didn’t have enough sense to get out. Since the best learning often comes from disasters, this was the case where I concluded: “Aha! The settlement lawyers need to withdraw if the case turns adversarial.” With that conclusion, everything fell into place and Collaborative Law was born. I started practicing collaborative family law exclusively as of January 1, 1990. We have over forty collaborative law practitioners in the Twin Cities. The idea has spread to include four or five communities in California, Eugene, OR, Columbus and Cincinnati, OH, Miami, Atlanta, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Dallas, Houston, Boston and Wisconsin.

AFCC: How does the role of the collaborative attorney differ from that of the traditional family lawyer?

SW: The role of the collaborative lawyer is dramatically different from the way a lawyer normally participates in a divorce proceeding. Perhaps because collaborative lawyers do not have the ability to participate if the matter escalates to court, they must learn different ways to assist clients in achieving agreement. We find that we are freed up to use our problem-solving skills in aid of settlement. I like to frame the process as one where the problem is in the middle of the table and the attorneys and clients are looking at it from different angles seeking a mutually satisfying solution. As a litigating lawyer, I found for the most part that I did not have the time or opportunity to approach problems this way as the proceedings were usually framed as a battle. We learn a lot from the mediation field in how to work toward agreement. The clients have a much more central role in the proceedings. The attorneys model behavior conducive to settlement and encourage sound listening skills.

AFCC: What setting or approach do you use to work on settlement?

SW: What works best for us is to meet in a four-way configuration around a conference table. We try to make the setting as informal as possible and encourage communication between the two lawyers and two clients. Thus, I may be talking to my client’s spouse directly—this would be almost heresy in traditional practice. We do as many four-way meetings as it takes to arrive at final settlement. Before the first four-way meeting, I will have conferred with my client and would have talked informally with the other attorney to establish good communication and confirm the relationship. We might also have a general discussion of the issues and take an initial try at an agenda for the first four-way meeting.

AFCC: How does it work to get the parties together in the same room?

SW: In most cases it works wonderfully. When I had an adversarial divorce practice, I used to resist the idea of getting the parties together when there were problems. Instead, we’d bring motions to have the court solve the problems. Now when a problem comes up, my first thought is, “We’ve got to get together and solve this!” Something almost magic sometimes happens in the four-way process. This is hard to put into words, but a shift of some sort occasionally takes place in the energy whereby the lines between the “sides” gets blurred and parties start seeing things more from their spouse’s position. If the parties cannot reach settlement with the help of their collaborative lawyers, there may be an exploration of whether they may want to try an alternative way to resolve their matter. If not, then their collaborative lawyers would withdraw and the parties would obtain attorneys to proceed to prepare the matter for trial.

AFCC: Isn’t it duplicative to have non-trial lawyers and then possibly having to hire trial attorneys as well?

SW: Out of context it does seem duplicative. In context, we need to understand that we lawyers, by training and instinct, are trial and court oriented. Even though we say we try to settle all our cases we drift to court proceedings. Once in court, the time, costs and stress start to escalate. Not being able to go to court requires the collaborative lawyer to become a settlement specialist. The trial lawyer is a trial specialist. The parties who have engaged collaborative lawyers for settlement and trial lawyers for trial have had the best of both approaches.

Professor Robert H. Mnookin to Present Meyer Elkin Address

Robert H. Mnookin

Professor Robert H. Mnookin, Samuel Williston Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, will present the Fourth Annual Meyer Elkin Address on May 11, 2001 at AFCC’s 38th Annual Conference in Chicago, IL.

The Meyer Elkin Address is presented annually by major contributors to the well being of families and children in honor of the late Meyer Elkin, founding member of AFCC and founding editor of the Family Court Review. The address has been presented previously by Marion Wright Edelman, founder of the Children’s Defense Fund, Peter Edelman, Georgetown University Law Center, and Jonathan Edelman, Stand for Children; Hon. George Thomson, former Deputy Minister of Justice of Canada and U.S. Senator Paul Wellstone and Ms. Sheila Wellstone.

Drawing on his recent book, Beyond Winning: Negotiating to Create Values in Deals and Disputes, Professor Mnookin will provide a conceptual framework for better understanding the challenges of divorce negotiations as well as advice about how professionals can help couples creatively resolve issues posed by divorce. Beyond Winning, winner of the Center for Public Resource Book Prize for the year 2000, is the most recent of nine books written or edited by Professor Mnookin.

Among his many recognitions, in 1993, together with co-author Eleanor McCoby, Professor Mnookin received the William J. Goode Book Award for their contribution to family scholarship for the book Dividing the Child: Social and Legal Dilemmas of Custody.

Professor Mnookin serves as Chair of the Steering Committee of the Program on Negotiation at Harvard Law School and Director of the Harvard Negotiation Research Project. Prior to joining the Harvard faculty, Professor Mnookin was the Adelbert H. Sweet Professor of Law at Stanford Law School and Director of the Stanford Center on Conflict and Negotiation.

Chicago’s Top Ten List

by Tracy Mayer, AFCC Intern, Madison, WI

AFCC’s Annual Conference will provide plenty of activity and for those looking for just a bit extra, the city of Chicago offers a myriad of activities available just outside the doors of the Westin Hotel Michigan Avenue.

Shop Til You Drop
Chicago’s Magnificent Mile begins right outside the hotel with a range of stores from Gucci to Tiffany and Co. The newly opened American Girl Store, ESPN Zone, F.A.O. Schwarz and Disney Quest are great attractions for kids of all ages. Water Tower Place, located across the street from the hotel, is one of the first vertical malls in the United States, featuring eight floors of shopping. Just around the corner is Oak Street for those who want a more upscale shopping experience. There you will find Chicago’s finest, including Nicole Miller and Versace.

The Museum Campus
It is only a short cab ride to the south end of the loop where you will find Chicago’s Museum Campus. Visit the Shedd Aquarium and take in a show at its Oceanarium with the spectacular Lake Michigan backdrop. Reach for the stars at the Adler Planetarium or take in the Field Museum of Natural History. Contact the Museum Campus Hotline at (312) 409-9696 for museum hours and updates on current exhibits.

The Art Institute of Chicago
If you haven’t been, the world renown Art Institute of Chicago is a must-see. Located on Michigan Avenue, just a couple of miles from the hotel, the Art Institute features classics such as Monet’s Water-lilies, Seurat’s Sunday in the Park and Chagall’s Windows.

Reach Fantastic Heights
Chicago is home to two of the tallest buildings in the world, The John Hancock Center and The Sears Tower. The John Hancock Center is directly across the street from the Westin Michigan Avenue. Take a ride up to the sky deck or relax over an appetizer, meal or drink at The 95th, at the top of the Hancock Center. Reservations are recommended so call ahead to (312) 787-9596.

See Great Sights
A stroll down Michigan Avenue includes the Chicago Water Tower, The Wrigley Building and many other splendid pieces of architecture. Take in the light show in Grant Park’s Buckingham Fountain or a boat ride on the Chicago River.

Navy Pier
Take the trolley from the hotel to Chicago’s famous Navy Pier. It is a wonderful way to spend an afternoon outdoors. Navy Pier includes shopping, dining, a giant Ferris Wheel and an outdoor theater.

Chicago’s Own Broadway
Chicago has an array of theaters that will satisfy any taste. Check out the Internet to find out what’s playing at the Goodman (www.goodman-theatre.org), Steppenwolf (www.steppenwolf.org), the Lyric Opera House (www.lyricopera.org) and the Symphony Center (www.chicagosymphony.org). These are just a few of Chicago’s favorite venues. Tickets are available online and at HotTix located on State Street across from Marshall Fields. HotTix sells half price, day-of-performance tickets for those willing to stand in line on the day of the show.

The Second City
Chicago is home to the famous Second City Improvisational Comedy Club, where stars including Jim and John Belushi, Shelley Long, George Wendt and Bill Murray got their start. Advance reservations are necessary, so contact the Second City at (312) 664-4032.

Our Nation’s Pastime
Sorry National League fans but the Cubs are away the week of the AFCC conference. However, the Chicago White Sox, last year’s American League Central Division Champions, are in town to play the Texas Rangers at Comisky Park. This is a great chance to relax, enjoy great baseball and an authentic Chicago-style hot dog. Saturday night games include a fireworks display after the game. Tickets range in price from approximately $16 to $26. The Sox website can be accessed through www.whitesox.mlb.com.

Great Food
If you like to eat then Chicago is the place for you. Visit the famous Billy Goat Tavern, inspiration for the famous Saturday Night Live “Cheeseburger! Cheeseburger!” sketch. Greektown, Little Italy and Chinatown offer dozens of great restaurants. The original Ed Debevic’s will bring you back to the 1950’s with its soda fountain and burgers. If you crave pizza, the original Uno’s is the best there is. The possibilities are endless!

20 Ways to Activate Your Local FCC

A FCC members consistently report that one of the greatest benefits of AFCC membership is networking with other members at AFCC conferences. To help facilitate networking and member involvement between conferences, AFCC is pleased to provide 20 ideas on how to get AFCC members involved at the local level.

Set up a Local Listserve
AFCC members in your state or province can be an invaluable resource for one another. Information can be posted about upcoming legislation, conferences, training programs, local networking opportunities, policy development, news flashes, etc.

Honor a Local AFCC Member
AFCC members are always doing something noteworthy for the community. Set up a luncheon or awards reception to acknowledge the outstanding efforts of an AFCC member in your community.

Early-Riser Breakfasts, Monthly Brown Bag Lunches or Wine & Cheese Receptions
Have an informal get-together on a regular basis. Pick a discussion topic for each session and designate one person to lead the group, find related readings and keep the group up-to-date on findings—even invite a guest speaker to lead discussion for the group! This is a great way to learn about your colleagues' work and personal interests as well as develop collaborative working relationships.

Honor a Potential AFCC Member
If a person is not an AFCC member then they are a potential member! Is there a local judge, lawyer, mediator, custody evaluator, researcher or educator who has done something noteworthy? An acknowledgment from a local group of AFCC members will foster good will, help spread the word about AFCC and provide a networking opportunity for members and potential members.

Affiliate with an Existing Local Conference or Seminar
Propose organizing an AFCC-style interdisciplinary workshop at a conference sponsored by a local organization such as a legal association or mental health group. Local organizations are always looking for planning assistance. This provides an opportunity to mention AFCC at the session and recruit potential members.

Organize a Fund Raising Event and Invite Non-AFCC Members
Let people out there know what AFCC stands for. Organize a fun-run, auction or concert-in-the-park in order to introduce people to AFCC as well as recruit potential members while raising money for the association. Auctions, golf outings, wine tastings or an annual appeal can increase local involvement.

Collaborate with Colleagues on an article for the AFCC Newsletter or the Family Court Review
The AFCC Newsletter is always interested in learning about new programs and local initiatives. Consider getting together with a couple of local colleagues to put together an article about what is going on in your region to share with fellow AFCC members worldwide. The Family Court Review publishes articles on research, policy issues, practice and program development. Collaborating on an article for the Review can lead to other projects, conference presentations and more!

Launch an AFCC Mentorship Program
Pair up local established members of AFCC with those colleagues who are new to the field. Try partnering with the local graduate school and their social work/psychology departments or a law school. This relationship can lead to numerous networking opportunities, invaluable lessons and professional friendships.

Hold a Mini-Conference
Consult with local AFCC members and choose a topic that needs to be addressed. Hold a half-day or day-long conference. Begin with a group meeting, followed by several afternoon workshops. Invite a "big name" AFCC member to speak on a topic.

AFCC NEWSLETTER • WINTER 2001
AFCC Membership

11
Attend an AFCC Conference as a Group
Arrange for a large group, 10 or more, to attend an AFCC Conference together. Traveling with a group always makes the experience much more memorable.

Organize an Informal Community Referral Network of AFCC Members or a Local Resource Center for Divorcing Parents
Compile resources and referral lists for distribution by the local court and community agencies that highlight resources such as AFCC pamphlets, videos, community services, pro bono services for mediation and crisis intervention programs to help families through separation and divorce.

Hold Internet Chat Room or Instant Messaging Forums
Take advantage of the incredible technology at your fingertips. Get together on AOL in a private chat room with other local AFCC members at designated times each week! Chat rooms and instant messaging are great ways to make connections, exchange ideas, post updates and initiate brain tingling discussions!

“Each One-Bring One” Dinner
Organize a dinner to introduce a colleague to AFCC and vice versa. Each member is responsible for bringing a potential member. This is a great method of recruitment as well as a wonderful opportunity to socialize and make connections with those in the community you might not otherwise meet!

Volunteer a Group to Help with an AFCC National Event in Your Area
Encourage your local members’ involvement in AFCC by helping the international association. This can increase your awareness of how the association works nationally and internationally as well as give you the opportunity for extended networking possibilities.

19
Form an AFCC Speakers’ Bureau
Develop and promote a list of AFCC members who are available to speak on such topics as mediation, domestic abuse, child development, child support and innovations in family law. Publicize this list to other local and related groups.

Start an AFCC Book Club
Bring together members to discuss recently published books or articles in the Family Court Review. Incorporate dinner or wine and cheese into the discussion.

Collaborate With Colleagues on an AFCC Conference Workshop Proposal
Broaden the knowledge of fellow members by introducing a local program or initiative recently instituted in your community. Collaborate on the proposal for an Annual or Regional Conference.

Start a Local Newsletter
Keep local members up to date on what is happening with AFCC and related organizations in your area, as well as nationally, by putting together a print or electronic newsletter. Involve members in writing and distribution.

November is Mediation Month
Several states and mediation organizations are attempting to coordinate mediation-related events in November. Have your Governor proclaim November as mediation month in your state and invite local dignitaries to join in the festivities.
Family Court Review to Publish Special Issue on Child Alienation

AFCC and the Family Court Review are pleased to present a Special Issue on Child Alienation in Divorce, scheduled for publication in July 2001. The issue, co-edited by Dr. Janet R. Johnston and Joan B. Kelly, was developed in collaboration with the Northern California Task Force on the Alienated Child.

“This special issue is a wonderful example of the critical importance of an interdisciplinary, collaborative approach to addressing controversial family law problems and the central role AFCC plays in bringing stakeholders together,” said Andrew Schepard, editor of the Review. This special issue will include the following articles:

“The Alienated Child: A Reformulation of Parental Alienation Syndrome,” by Joan B. Kelly and Janet R. Johnston

“Should Judges Close the Gate on PAS and PA?” by Justice R. James Williams

“Assessing for Alienation in Child Custody and Access Evaluations,” by S. Margaret Lee and Nancy W. Olesen

“Legal and Psychological Management of Cases with an Alienated Child,” by Matthew J. Sullivan and Joan B. Kelly

“Therapeutic Work with Alienated Children and their Families,” Janet R. Johnston, Marjorie Gans Walters and Steven Freidlander

Student Note

All AFCC members will receive a copy as a benefit of AFCC membership.

Kids Count Club Thanks Contributors

AFCC’s Kids Count Club thanks the Suzie S. Thorn Family Foundation and Mr. Len Carpenter of Hamilton, Ontario, for their generous support of AFCC’s Kids Count Club. Both contributions were made at the Diamond Level ($1,000-$4,999) and have given a terrific boost to this year’s fundraising campaign.

The Kids Count Club has launched an ambitious fundraising drive for 2000-01 in an effort to raise $30,000 for AFCC’s Resource Development Fund. AFCC is looking to support development of enhanced member services; provide conference scholarships; create opportunities for additional use of Internet technology for member networking; continue to conduct Youth Forum programs and provide financial awards to members of the communities which host AFCC conferences. AFCC would like to thank the following members for being the first to contribute to this year’s fundraising campaign:

AFCC Chapter Update

AFCC Welcomes Florida as its Newest Chapter

The AFCC Executive Committee has approved the application of the Florida Chapter for provisional chapter status. A membership drive spearheaded by the Florida Chapter Coordinating Committee resulted in a near doubling of AFCC’s Florida membership which now stands at more than one hundred members. The inaugural Florida Chapter Conference will take place November 9-10, 2001 in Tampa, FL.

AFCC congratulates its newest chapter and coordinating committee members, Deborah Day, Linda Fieldstone, Shelly Finnem, Greg Firestone, Joe Hood, JoAnne Holt, Judy Kreeger and Hon. Hugh Starnes. For information on joining AFCC’s Florida Chapter please contact JoAnne Holt at jholtcpa@gate.net or (941) 337-1979.

Massachusetts Chapter Conference

The AFCC Massachusetts Chapter will hold its 2001 conference on Friday, May 4, 2001 at Northeastern University Law School in Boston, MA. The theme is Focusing on Fathers: Completing the Parenting Equation with a keynote address from Kyle Pruett, M.D., Yale Child Study Center, and author of Fatherneed: Why Father Care is as Essential as Mother Care for Your Child.

The conference will include workshops on topics including developmentally appropriate parenting plans, father absence, attachment theory, violent fathers and their children and gay and lesbian families. For further information, please contact Nancy Perkins at (508) 856-8600.

AFCC Arizona Chapter Conference a Success

by Fred Mitchell, Past President, Arizona AFCC Chapter, Tucson, AZ

AFCC’s Arizona Chapter attracted its largest attendance in history at its Annual Chapter Conference, February 9-11, 2001 in Sedona, AZ. The conference theme, Picking Up the Pieces: A Team Approach to Strengthening Families, aptly described a weekend which enabled participants to explore the role of family court as the anchor for those who help families weather the trauma of divorce and family reorganization.

Preceding the conference, and in keeping with its theme, the Collaborative Divorce team from California presented a five-hour pre-conference institute on an interdisciplinary and therapeutic approach to supporting families through the divorce process.

Professor Jay Folberg, former AFCC President, opened the conference with the question, “Would we design a system of family courts just like the system we have now if we were starting from scratch?” Professor Folberg argued for more experimentation with family court systems in order to meet the complex challenges of changing families.

Author and researcher Dr. Robert Emery presented his longitudinal study of mediation and litigation in custody and access cases. The study demonstrated much better outcomes, even 12 years later, for parental involvement in their children’s lives if they mediated their parenting agreements instead of litigating in court.

Conference workshop topics included: the marriage support movement; the increased emphasis on the rights and voices of children in the divorce process; new approaches for assessing and treating high conflict family situations; the development of Arizona’s model parenting plans and the process of developing family law legislation.

The conference closed with a panel of experts moderated by former Arizona AFCC President Robert Barrasso. The panel included Arizona Chief Justice Thomas Zlaket, Dean Toni Massaro of the University of Arizona College of Law, Judge Steve Rubin, representing the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, psychologist Lynne Kenney Markan and State Representative Bob McLendon.

Arizona AFCC was honored to host International AFCC President Hon. Arline Rotman who gave a welcoming address at Saturday’s luncheon. In her remarks, Judge Rotman echoed our theme and AFCC’s forte, the convening of family law and ancillary discipline professionals, meeting together as equal team members to meet the challenges of strengthening families.
